Air Show Demographics

Provided by the International Council of Air Shows

Who goes to air shows?

Each year, millions of people throughout North America will make their way to their local or regional air show. But what types of people comprise these large audiences? A recently completed survey of more than 1,047 air show spectators commissioned by the International Council of Air Shows documents that it is a well-educated, affluent group of men, women and children of all ages.

- Over 78 percent (78.1%) of air show spectators have at least some college education. More than 32 percent have at least one college degree
- Nearly two-thirds (82.3%) report a household income of $50,000 or more and 56 percent report income of $75,000 or more

Air Show Attendance

One of the best-kept secrets is now out! From the earliest barnstormers of the 1920s and 1930s to today's highly professional aerobatic experts, air show pilots have demonstrated that the public's interest in aviation entertainment is not a fad. Year-in and year-out for more than 100 years, air shows have been among North America's largest spectator events.

In the last millennium, air shows were the second most popular spectator sport in North America and continue to hit record numbers. Over 26 million people attend more than 400 air shows annually. During the past decade, air shows drew nearly twice the attendance figures of NFL football. Air shows deliver significant and measurable results for everyone, from mature product marketers with broad customer bases, to new product marketers, to those with specialized or niche customer bases.

Whatever your marketing objective – moving product, building recognition, enhancing or positioning brand image – air shows can help you accomplish your goals.
